A Terrible Explosion Reported This Morning on the Union Stock Yards.

A desperate and bloody affray—and that, too, right, in a well-at the Union Stock Yards, at 10 o'clock this morning.

It appears that a number of laborers had been employed in digging a well, and that the water was found at a depth of forty feet. Yesterday the men struck a vein of quicksand, and the water rose within 15 feet of the surface. This morning the men went to work, and when they had reached a depth of about 30 feet, the quicksand began to rise, and the water came in with such force that the men were compelled to leave the well. Some of the men had their tools in the well, and they went down to get them. Among the number was a man named Thomas Hogan, who had been employed on the work but a few days. He went down the ladder, and when he reached the bottom he found the water rising rapidly around him. He called to the men above to pull up the ladder, but they refused to do so, and he was compelled to climb up the ladder as the water rose around him. He reached the top of the well, and was about to step off, when he was struck by
